

Social Workers, Counselors & Clinical Addiction Specialists

Why might you and your colleagues be ideal to offer nicotine dependence relief and recovery?

- You believe that protecting children is never less important than profiting from the lack of needed information and unhealthy behaviors of their parents and other adults.
- You believe in the value of evidence-based clinical practice and have at least a sound basic understanding of research and its principles.
- You are probably more apt to see and more easily relate to adults who smoke, dip or chew tobacco for nicotine.
- You already know more than the basics regarding addiction and so can more easily recognize whether or not statements made about substance dependency are valid.
- While remaining extraordinarily compassionate, you will be truthful, honest, up-front, candid with clients and patients.

Leading Nicotine Dependence Relief and Recovery programs is, I believe, your best opportunity to gain considerable independence doing essentially what you're in practice to do: be truly helpful, save lives and protect children and others who need it offering a service no other profession does and earning an income greater than usual and closer to what a professional like you deserves.
